

I have spent the last 10 years of my life bouncing around from one unfulfilling corporate job to the next. I finally found my professional happiness at NBC News. Of course my family, friends and cats are the most important to me, but my job at NBC represents a new chapter in my life and I even have a TV on my desk that I can watch all day long! (The picture is of the awning of the building in which I work. The hand is holding up my NBC News ID).

I've always found it difficult for me to express my emotions. That was until I discovered the companionship of a pet. My three cats keep me grounded and are generous to provide me an outlet to pour out my love.

Whenever I feel alone or upset, they're always there to comfort me. This was especially true five years ago on this exact date. They are my babies, they are my girls. They give me so much joy and teach me about life and about myself. (The pictures shows Charlotte (calico) and Harry (tabby) on the bed and Bernie (calico and Charlotte's mother) on the floor.
